

COLLISION PROVES
FATAL TO CASHION

Ulysses Cashion, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Cashion, of Westlake avenue, passed away last Sunday morning at 9 o'clock in Mary's Help hospital in San Francisco. Ulysses' death resulted from injuries sustained when the bicycle upon which he was riding with 11-year-old Ralph Hull, crashed into a municipal bus in the Olympic golf grounds, Wednesday, June 30. Young Hull succumbed to the injuries he sustained shortly after the boys were taken to the Park Emergency hospital.

Young Cashion was removed to Mary's Help hospital, where the injured leg and arm were amputated in a desperate attempt to save his life. Finally on Saturday no further hope was held for the lad's recovery, and he passed away at an early hour Sunday morning.

He leaves his parents, a sister, Lois Cashion, and a brother, Leroy Cashion, to mourn his untimely passing.

Ulysses Cashion was well known in Daly City, where he carried the Shopping News for several years. He was a student at Jefferson Union high school and had a host of friends who will mourn his untimely passing.

The funeral was conducted from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., at 2:30 o'clock last Wednesday afternoon. Interment was in Cypress Lawn Memorial Park.

STOOPS ESCAPES
TERM IN PRISON

Elmer Stoops, who was accused of arson and burglary in connection with a fire some time ago at the American Legion Hall in Daly City, last Monday was sentenced to six months imprisonment in the county jail at Redwood City, the sentence being imposed by Judge Maxwell McNutt. Sentence was suspended, however, by Judge McNutt.

It is understood District Attorney Edmund Scott consented to drop the burglary charge and reduce the arson charge to a misdemeanor.

The American Legion building, on San Diego avenue, was set on fire on Sunday evening, June 18, following robbery of the building, silverware, dishes and foodstuff being taken from the building. Fortunately the blaze was discovered in time to prevent serious damage to the building.

Elmer Stoops, of 134 Park avenue, admitted that he had looted the building and then started the blaze, and was taken to jail to face a charge of arson and burglary.

"I had no reason for wanting to destroy the Legion hall," Stoops told Assistant District Attorney Harold F. Anderson when he was taken before the district attorney for questioning. "I have no malice towards this organization or any other. But every time I have a few drinks I do crazy things like that."

DALY CITY REPRESENTED AT BRIDGE GROUND BREAKING

Mayor H. H. Smith and A. J. Bodien, superintendent of the Daly City municipal water department, represented Daly City in the ground breaking ceremonies of the San Francisco-Oakland bay bridge at Yerba Buena last Sunday. Earl Lee Kelly, Director of Public Works, presided at the island. Governor James Rolph, Jr., gave the welcoming address at the ground breaking site on Yerba Buena island pier. Governor Rolph used a gold spade presented by the San Francisco Motor Car Dealers' Association.

Ex-President Herbert Hoover, of Palo Alto, was among the honored guests.

On the Governor's platform were seated the mayors of the East Bay towns, Governor Balzar of Nevada and other notables. Mayor Smith and Mr. Bodien were also seated on that platform as representatives of Daly City. Special boats transported the guests to and from the island.

GARIBALDI NAMED SEALER OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

John Garibaldi, of Colma, has been reappointed as county sealer of weights and measures, succeeding Edward J. Ford, of Daly City, who for a number of years has been the county sealer of weights and measures.

The appointment of Mr. Garibaldi was made by the county supervisors last Monday.

The board was urged by Engineer James to pass the salary ordinance as soon as possible in order that he may determine the wage scale of road workers, surveyors, etc., working out of his office under the charter set-up. In the event that passage of the budget as a whole is held up, he urged that the provision affecting his office be determined within a week, or that he be given permission to operate under the old scale.

The Century of Progress
Exposition at Chicago

By DR. A. A. SHAGHOIAN

It is as hard to describe the Century of Progress exhibition at Chicago in a few words, as it is to see it in a few days. The Fair is built on land reclaimed from lovely Lake Michigan, and is only a few blocks from downtown Chicago, with its forest of dark, coal smudged skyscrapers, and ceaseless traffic of street cars, people, elevated trains, and automobiles.

The never ending, roaring voice of the city is not so loud as the Fair is approached. The tall, slender towers of the Sky-Ride, with their suspended cable and track, are the most prominent landmarks of the Fair. After passing the blue towers of the North Gate of the grounds, one sees buildings such as have never been built before, on each side of avenues hung with great, brilliant red flags.

The crowds that walk through the Fair streets look with wonder at towers, domes, long rectangular buildings, circular buildings, some with curved roofs, others with level deck roofs, all painted in strong colors. Some structures are blue, yellow and silver; others are orange, red, yellow and black. The Court of the States is a triangular building in blue, with a dome of gold, and slender white towers rising from the corners of the building. The barkers, wheel-chair men, guides, jinricksha boys, busses, guards in brilliant uniforms, add to the noise, movement, and color of the crowd, and further down the grounds, the Midway, or Zone, offers you all kinds of side-shows for your money.

By contrast to the newer architecture, there are the Chinese temple of Jehol, the building of the Aztecs of ancient Mexico, the mud huts of some American Indians, the Oriental Village and the Belgian Village, which is like a page out of the Middle Ages.

To one who has seen the San Francisco World Fair of 1915, the Chicago Fair does not seem as well laid out and as comprehensive in its exhibits. The Chicago Fair has limited itself to telling the story of what mankind has accomplished in its many branches of endeavor, and has tried to do so by reproductions in miniature that explain themselves with the aid of the fewest possible words. The best examples will be seen in the great Hall of Science. Here are exhibits of mathematics, physics, chemistry, biology, medicine, and geology.

In the chemistry section, you pass before tables along the walls, on each of which some experiment is continually repeated, so that what goes on may actually be seen. An ingenious machine measures small amounts of potassium nitrate, carbon and sulphur from turning jars, into a small moving spoon; the spoon moves away from the jars to a sparking point, is touched by it, and a flash occurs, all this showing the making and using of gunpowder. Another table shows a heated roll of bright copper in a large, clear glass jar; oxygen flows in the jar, and the copper turns black because the oxygen has combined with it to form copper rust. Then hydrogen is passed through, and the black disappears, because the hydrogen combines with the oxygen, leaving the copper bright again. Models and pictures show the uses of chemistry in industry.

The Science of Medicine occupies the largest space in this great building, and shows the tremendous progress that has been made in this branch, and the great men that have contributed to it, and brought it so far from the magic that was practiced by the Indian medicine man. All of the exhibits in this section are extremely interesting and valuable to everyone, and they teach what all should know about health, disease, and the control and prevention of disease. The important truth that a patient should fully co-operate with his physician is strikingly shown here. The story of the progress of medicine is too long to be told here, as it deserves more space than it can be given here at this time.

Astronomy is one of the sciences in the great hall, but the principal exhibit is given at the Adler Planetarium, a permanent building belonging to the city of Chicago. There are only two such buildings in the world, equipped to show the movements of the stars, planets and suns, on its inside "sky dome." There, at the will of the lecturer, a wonderful apparatus shows the sky at any hour, day, month, year, or century, and at any point north or south of the equator. The appearance of this starry sky is so true to nature that the audience gasps in surprise and pleasure.

The transport building is the most unusual structure, because it has, over its tower, a great dome roof suspended from above like a bridge, and with no supports from below, making possible a great unobstructed floor space. There is told the story of transportation, from foot travel to airplanes. In procession pass the beast of burden, the sled, cart, covered wagon, the first railroad engine, the early auto buggy, followed by the sleek, newest locomotives, automobiles, and airplanes. Water transport progresses from the raft, row-boat, and sailing vessel, to the huge ocean steamers.

The electrical building houses the exhibits of the large electrical manufacturers, and takes up the story of electricity from where the Hall of Sciences left it, and demonstrates the industrial applications of this great servant of mankind.

The Social Science Hall is probably the most thought provoking exhibit at the Fair. There you see, by means of small or life-size models, how prehistoric peoples lived and died; how our great-grandfathers lived, and finally down to our own times, where we see ourselves as others see us. It is a story of how nations carry on their daily life, through labor, co-operation, and government, and how idleness, refusal to co-operate, and misgovernment interrupt progress.

In the Agricultural building are shown the advances in scientific farming, but nowhere did I see any solution of the farmers' financial troubles. The dairy exhibit, in a separate structure, effectively shows the difference and progress of this very important industry, from the very often dirty, unspectated, and unhealthy production of milk of not long ago, to the modern dairy of today, where cleanliness, rigid inspection of cows and workmen for disease, pasteurization and the control of quality of milk products protect the consumer. Here is another place where is shown the important relationship of biology, chemistry, and medicine to every day life.

Great organizations, such as General Motors, build Chevrolets before your eyes, in their large building. Firestone makes tires for you, in his factory on the grounds; the tires are made there in clean, gleaming white and shining steel machines. Sears Roebuck has a great building where people may come and sit, or to see the story of how they shop. All of these buildings are unusual in design and color. Many of them have no windows, and are artificially lighted and ventilated, a most satisfactory thing in a city where it can be blazing hot one day and dull, cloudy, rain the next.

At night the Fair becomes almost another exhibit outwardly. Some parts of the buildings merge into the darkness of the night sky, but the towers seemingly float in the air, as of red, blue, or yellow light shapes. Fountains with changing colored lights play in the lagoons. They look like magic fireworks, with their rise and fall, mist and stream.

San Mateo Boy Hiker
Murdered in Nevada

Declared to have been murdered for the small amount of money in his pocket, William T. Tichnor, 18-year-old son of William W. Tichnor, San Mateo shoe merchant and well known civic worker, was found dead last week beside a lonely road in the mountains near Wells, Nevada, according to word which reached the father last Monday.

Search was immediately begun for a mysterious man and woman with whom the boy is declared to have left a small town near Salt Lake City, either July 4 or 5.

The boy had cashed a check for $18 a short time before, but authorities found only a penny in his pocket, they reported. A picture of the boy's mother was also found in the lad's pocket, along with a letter from the mother, showing that she had sent him the check which he had received at Salt Lake.

Falls Off Land's End Cliff

Andrew Brennan, 29, is in a hospital in San Francisco with fractures of the leg and arm, suffered when he plunged 250 feet from the cliffs at Land's End, near the Golden Gate. Brennan fell while trying to save his companion, Dorothea Palamoutain, Oakland society girl, who had lost her grip while scaling the cliffs. Miss Palamoutain broke her fall in a clump of bushes and was uninjured.

CANADIAN PLACER
MINING BOOMING

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work.

Placer operations in British Columbia in the year 1932 were more than ten times as valuable as in 1931, according to the annual report of the Minister of Mines, just off the press. The comprehensive review of mining calls attention to a condition we have emphasized, saying:

"Throughout the province, in old and new gold camps, prospectors and scouting engineers are energetically seeking for properties."

It is pertinently pointed out that the increased output of gold is only a slight indication of the activity in searching for and developing gold properties. In elucidation of this point the report states:

"The latent gold possibilities of the mineralized areas of the province are now receiving belated recognition, and there seems little doubt that several new gold mines will result from the extensive developments under way and planned for the 1933 season."

New York bankers have received encouragement from latest developments in the Nicola Mines & Metals property, in which they are heavily interested. Rich ore shoots are anticipated at a good depth. Assays run from $12 to $45 to the ton in a shoot of developed ore close to the thousand foot shaft.

Mergers are getting to be quite the thing up north. Bridge River Ogden Gold Mines, owning valuable property in Bridge River, has concluded a deal under which the company has taken over the Short of Bacon group, adjoining Bralorne. The merger gives the Bridge River Ogden company about six hundred acres next to Bralorne. Three good ore bodies have been exposed on the company's claims by recent development.

Congressman Harry L. Englebright of the Grass Valley district has come out for a modification of the embargo on gold. He recently had the following to say in the San Francisco Chronicle:

"If the gold miners of this country are permitted to export their newly-mined gold and receive the world market price the growth of the industry will be rapid and it undoubtedly will experience the greatest prosperity in its history. This will add greatly to alleviating unemployment."

In leading up to that conclusion the Federal legislator said:

"By existing law the selling price of a pure ounce of gold at the United States Mint is $20.67. This is all, under existing law and regulations, that the mint is permitted to pay, and since the exportation of gold is prohibited, the benefits of foreign currency exchange rates and the selling price of gold on the world market cannot be obtained in the United States. The selling price of gold on the world market in terms of our currency, at present would make gold worth $26 per ounce, except for the exportation prohibition."

"Secretary of the Treasury Woodin has said a free market for gold here is not contemplated. Inasmuch as $20.67 is the price for an ounce of gold, and due to increase in the price of commodities, materials and supplies, many of the large gold mining companies fear that within a short period of time the costs of operation may advance to a point that will restrict their activities, or close their mines. The effect of the embargo on the gold mining industry of this country is most unfair."

The Congressman makes the timely suggestion that the embargo order be modified to permit the exportation of newly-mined gold produced in the United States.

RESIDENTS URGED TO HELP PREVENT FIRE

Residents of Daly City are asked to help their firemen by helping to prevent fires. The following notation is to be found on the back of the water bills for the month ending June 18.

HELP YOUR FIREMEN

The fire boys of our city are doing everything in their power to cut the fire causes to a minimum. Help them by disposing of all rubbish and weeds that may be about the yard or basement.

Also, learn the location of the nearest fire alarm box, as this will save time.

To help fight fire properly, remain at box after giving the alarm, so you may direct apparatus to scene of fire.

Much of the damage done by fire can be prevented if residents of Daly City will follow these instructions.

BUSINESS LICENSE
PASSED BY BOARD

The new ordinance regulating the business license fees had its final reading, and was passed by a unanimous vote of the board at the City Council meeting last Monday. There has been a complete revision of the ordinance regulating the payment of business licenses in Daly City, in which the ordinance committee gave careful study, so as to have license regulation that will mutually benefit the Daly City merchants.

Mayor Smith reported on a meeting he and Councilman Selmi attended at Sacramento of the California State Highway Commission. He reported that the meeting was held with the object of giving the counties and cities of this state an opportunity to present their proposals for projects they contemplate doing with their portion of the $16,000,000 Federal allocation to this state, that they anticipate receiving. The distribution of this money is left within the power of the State Highway Commission, with the understanding with the Federal government that they consider projects first that are ready to start immediately, so as to help relieve unemployment as soon as possible, and they will also consider projects that will derive the most good for the State in general. San Francisco proposed several projects. The first and most important to them being the widening of Mission street through Daly City. This project being outside of San Francisco county, and receiving the preferred place on their list, brought an expression of approval for the San Francisco officials. He further expressed his desire that the board instruct the clerk to send a letter to Mayor Rossi of San Francisco expressing the board's appreciation in behalf of the people of Daly City for the unselfishness that is evident by their action in placing a project that is out of their county as project number one.

A letter was received from the County Planning Commissioner, Mr. Pomroy, in which he reviewed Daly City's requisition for money from the National Industrial Recovery Act for two contemplated projects in Daly City, which are the extension of the water system in the southern part of Daly City, and also for a new civic center, which Mr. Pomroy is to present in person in Washington. He stated that his part in presenting these projects was merely primary action, and that final action would come from an administrator that is yet to be appointed in California.

VETS MUST UNITE IN OWN DEFENCE

"Veterans must unite in a demand for the repeal of the Economy Act and its drastic effects upon the disabled veteran, if the welfare of those who fought in defence of their country is to be preserved," declares Commander L. W. Johnston, of Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

At a recent meeting the above comment was made, and at the same time many things of interest to all veterans was discussed. The program of Old Glory Post No. 2044 has been one of many features of great entertainment. The food sale held by the Ladies' Auxiliary was a success from every point of view. If one wants a good meal already cooked for them, all one has to do is to attend one of these sales, and the entire meal can be purchased very reasonably. Immediately following the recent picnic, the members of Old Glory entered into a week of many attractions. The degree team dance held on Saturday night, July 8, was exceptionally well attended. The floor was crowded, and it was indeed a fortunate move to get the Civic Auditorium, where all who attended could dance to the wonderful music without much confusion or crowded condition.

The next meeting of the Post will be held Friday, July 14, and it has been set aside as Vice-Commander's night, and the entire program will be under the supervision of Senior Vice-Commander Allen, assisted by Junior Vice-Commander Brulez. The program will be one of interest to all, including a short address by Mr. Horace Amphet, member of Matalan Post No. 2068, San Mateo. The Post will also be honored with the presence of the Department Senior Vice-Commander Edward Secord, of San Jose.

It is announced by Comrade Fred Collins that due to vacations it has been decided to call a halt during the next five or six weeks of the Auxiliary drill team practices. The Auxiliary team is progressing by leaps and bounds under the able

TANFORAN PLANS WEEK END RACES

The San Mateo County Jockey Club, through its General Manager, Ralph C. MacArthur, has announced that racing will be put on at Tanforan on Friday and Saturday for the remainder of the month of July and on into August until the projected Seattle meeting opens.

There are about five hundred horses at the course in racing condition and inasmuch as the plant will be open for training, it has been decided to continue on an abbreviated scale for the enjoyment of the public, also giving the horsemen an opportunity to earn some "feed money."

Beginning Friday, July 14, there will be seven races or more each afternoon. Contests of high calibre can be confidently expected for the Friday and Saturday programs.

One of the features on a Saturday will be the first appearance on an American race course of the sensational Australian runner, Winooka, now in light training at John W. Marchbank's Heather Farm. Winooka is pronounced by competent critics to be a grand individual and judging from his record "down under" should carry on in a successful manner in competition with good horses in this country.

Pillow Fight, the clever galloper from New Zealand, is also scheduled to appear under colors in the week end sport. This invader is coming leadership and competent drilling of Comrade Collins.

From all reports our new Department Commander Neron, who was recently elected to that office, has one of the most energetic programs, one comprising all phases of Veteran work, and we are confident that his personality will be injected into the Veteran programs, and we anticipate one of the most successful years of the organization. We know that the junior officers under him will give their very all to put his programs before the public in a fitting manner. With the next ranking officer in our own jurisdiction, Comrade Secord, in the office of Senior Vice-Commander, we know that our district will be more than well represented.

Remember, Comrades, Old Glory Post meets every second and fourth Friday in Masonic Hall, and all visiting comrades are cordially invited to attend the meetings.

FRED R. LINSER, Adjutant.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY NOTES

The Junior Members of the Daly City Unit 410 were given an outing in Golden Gate Park a week ago Friday by the chairman, Mrs. Virginia Callsen. Mrs. Callsen was assisted by Mrs. Latin, Mrs. Foreman and Mrs. Hanselman. Everyone had a marvelous time and came home tired but happy.

The regular meeting of the Unit was held last Friday, at which time first nomination of officers for the coming year was held. The President, Mrs. Margaret Kenny, being in the country on her vacation, Mrs. Hilda Przyborski presided. Several other members are also away on vacation.

Daly City Unit 410 has the honor of being in second place in the rehabilitation work of the Eighth District. The Unit has furnished aid to many veterans both in the hospitals and at home by contributions of clothing, groceries, money, cigarettes and other necessities. Several members have aided in the work of helping the unemployed in Daly City.

INTERESTING MEETING OF VETERAN FIREMEN

The members of the Veteran Firemen's Association of Daly City had an interesting meeting on Friday, evening, July 7. President J. Callan called the meeting to order at 8 P. M., and after the regular order of business, Comrade Doyle presented the association and drill team with fire axes, which added color to the initiatory team.

Mr. Donovan and Mr. Valenti were then initiated into the ranks, they having served in the fire department. A vote of thanks was tendered when Senior Vice-President Rickmann presented a case made of glass to hold a silver trumpet dated 1867, when there were volunteer firemen in San Francisco. The trumpet and a large picture of the volunteer firemen of that period was presented to the association by Comrade Knowles, who is one of the seven surviving firemen of the San Francisco volunteer fire department, and who now resides in Daly City.

The president called upon Captain Goldkuhl to tell about the brackets which were holding the old brass lanterns used on the hose and reel cart before we got electric lights. He stated the lanterns were put on each side of the charter to illuminate the charter.

The committee in charge of the picnic that was held on Sunday, July 2, at Alpine Grove, reported the outing was a success, over 500 being present with basket lunches. Coffee and lemonade was served by the committee and enjoyed by the picnicers.

It was suggested the adoption of the Bodien plan, that all clubs, associations, societies, fraternal orders, etc., register at the office of the chief of police the date of their picnics, in order that conflicting dates might be avoided.

Several comrades commented on the drill team, under Captain Goldkuhl's command. Marshal Hilton did his part well. Comrade Selmi then told the Veterans about a trip made to Sacramento with Comrade H. H. Smith, which was very interesting.

Comrade Smith expressed appreciation of the gift to the Veterans by Comrade Knowles, and praised the efforts of the firemen of the present and the past. Remarks were also made by Comrades Sunderman, Ford, Verino, Shaw, Green and others, and then the committee on refreshments got busy, their efforts rounding out an enjoyable evening.

Property Owners to Aid the Renovize Committee

Property owners throughout San Mateo county will be approached in the early part of August to pledge that they will expend one million dollars in improving their property, is the goal of the Renovize San Mateo county campaign committee.

"This campaign is of tremendous importance to the citizens of San Mateo county," said Frank M. McVeigh, campaign director, "because it will afford the property owners an opportunity to make needed improvements before the prices of building materials are greatly advanced."

"In addition," McVeigh pointed out, "seventy per cent of this one million dollars will be paid directly to the working men of San Mateo county. It is the intention of the committee in sponsoring this campaign to not only stimulate business throughout the county, but to provide employment for our local mechanics and laborers."

"We are confident of the success of this campaign; because of the interest already displayed by property owners in all parts of the county, and we are confident that many local men will be employed because our committee is urging and aiding San Francisco in launching a similar campaign."

"We are urging all property owners to employ local laborers in improving their property," Mr. McVeigh added. "This campaign is a San Mateo county campaign, and we believe that it is a wise investment for all property owners to aid the local citizens."

"We are attempting to reach an agreement with San Francisco where, in they will, so far as possible, prevent their mechanics and laborers from participating in the work created in San Mateo county as a result of this Renovize Campaign."

"This campaign will not only aid the unskilled men in our county, but will be a direct benefit to all lines of business."

POISON DEATH ON COAST LAID TO SHELL FISH

A new warning against eating mussels gathered on the coast of San Mateo county was issued Tuesday from the office of Dr. F. Holmes Smith, county health officer, with reports of ten persons made ill by the shell fish and one death, which authorities said may be attributed to the same cause.

The death was that of Florensis Quintong, 24, whose body was found in bed at a Half Moon Bay pea pickers, camp last Saturday.

CALIFORNIA STOCKED WITH GAME BIRDS

The open season for California pheasants is from November 15 to 20 this year. A recent issue of the P. G. & E. Progress contains the following interesting article regarding the bringing of that game bird to California:

Pheasants have been added to California's already wide assortment of wild game birds. There are thousands of them in valleys and mountain areas from one end of the state to the other, though thirty-odd years ago there wasn't one outside of an aviary. So numerous are they that an open season has been declared for this fall, November 15 to 20, when pheasant hunting, once the exclusive privilege of kings and nobles, will become the sport of any Californian who has a shotgun.

California can thank man, not nature, for its pheasants. In 1880 or thereabouts Judge O. N. Denny, then Consul-General at Shanghai, sent two small flocks of Chinese ringneck pheasants to friends in Portland, Oregon. About the same time he shipped a number to San Francisco, but the man to whom they were consigned died a day before the pheasants arrived. Not knowing why the birds had been sent, friends and relatives killed and ate them. In Oregon, however, Judge Denny's pheasants were released in the Willamette valley, where they increased so rapidly that the state soon became thoroughly stocked with them.

From Oregon, pheasants were introduced into California and propagated in private game farms and finally on state game farms established by the State Fish and Game Commission. In the past eight years, as a result of the state operations, about 150,000 pheasants have been hatched, raised and liberated. Natural increases in the flocks have multiplied many times over, with the result that today pheasants are almost as common as quail in some parts of California.

There are 344 licensed pheasantries in the state, many of them nationally known. The Sheldon Knoll Pheasantry at Saratoga, to mention a completely modern establishment, raises many varieties for aviaries, for private game preserves and for table purposes. Its stock of pheasants includes China ringnecks, Mongolians, Lady Amherst, Reeves, Silver and Golden, besides which it raises Hungarian and Chukar partridges, Valley and Bob White quail, wild turkeys, and other game birds.

The state opened a game farm near Hayward in 1916 and for two years raised pheasants there. This farm was then given up, but in 1925 another farm with eight acres of pens was established at Yountville, Napa county. Two hundred ringnecks were brought in from Oregon for breeding purposes, and August F. Bade, an expert from Washington, was appointed to direct the work of propagation.

The plan was a success from the start. Three thousand birds were reared and released in 1916, and since then the output has multiplied by leaps and bounds. Breeding flocks were increased and propagation was extended to include fifteen varieties of pheasants as well as partridge, quail and Mexican wild turkeys. Two acres of pens were added a few years ago and a second farm set up at Chino, San Bernardino county. Meanwhile, many private game farms and sportsmen's clubs have helped substantially by hatching eggs furnished by the state. This year 100,000 eggs were produced, 75,000 at Yountville alone.

Much of the credit for California's record in pheasant propagation goes to equipment operated by gas and electricity—incubators, brooders and heating and ventilating appliances. Harry L. Borden, owner of the Sheldon Knoll Pheasantry, states the case for many private establishments when he says that it took electric incubators and brooders to make pheasant farming possible on a large scale. At first he used domestic hens to hatch pheasant eggs. The hens cost him $225, and he had to feed them for a year. They broke large numbers of eggs and maimed many small chicks; they needed constant attention to keep them free from vermin and disease. After one year of hens, Borden put in electric equipment and away went nine-tenths of his troubles, while his hatching and brooding costs dropped to $52 a season.

Electricity does almost all of the work at the state's two game farms. At Yountville there are several electric incubators with a total hatching capacity of 15,000 eggs every twenty-three days, besides sixty 125-chick electric brooders and several hundred 18-chick units. The breeding buildings are heated and ventilated by electricity.

TEMPORARY GASKET

A temporary gasket for the intake manifold, vacuum tank, oilpan or any place about the motor except exhaust manifold or cylinder head can be made out of an old desk blotter or similar absorbent paper, according to the free emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

Let's hope the new Federal Reserve chairman, Mr. Black, will help get us out of the red.

PRESIDENT PRAISES BOY TRAFFIC PATROL

The School Traffic Patrol movement has received a hearty endorsement from President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Commendation of the Patrol by the President was expressed in a letter to Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile Association. A copy of the letter has been received by the California State Automobile Association, sponsor of the Patrol in northern and central California. President Roosevelt stressed the importance of the Patrols not only because of the protection they afford against accidents to school children, but because of their beneficial effect in building morale, a sense of responsibility, and good citizenship.

The President's letter was occasioned by a safety parade at the capitol in which 4,000 boys participated, representing Patrol organizations from various nearby states and the District of Columbia. The text of the letter follows:

"I want you to know how greatly interested I am in the safety demonstration of schoolboy patrols from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and the District of Columbia."

"Were it possible I would not only witness the parade of these boys, but also express to them my very real appreciation of the work they are doing as part of a great safety corps of 200,000 schoolboy patrols in 1,800 cities and towns in the United States."

"In addition to the day-to-day protection against accidents to school children afforded by the patrols, the movement is unquestionably a fine builder of morale. It also develops a sense of responsibility which cannot but make for good citizenship."

"It is my sincere hope that it will continue to expand and remain as a permanent feature of our national effort in the interest of traffic safety."

The President's interest in the patrols and in child safety, it is pointed out, extends back to the days of his first term as Governor of New York, when he often received and bestowed awards on boys cited for specially meritorious work.

"Music in the Air" Coming To The Curran Theatre

An announcement of extraordinary importance is the news that Belasco and Curran will bring their most elaborate and spectacular production of the reigning New York and London musical success, "Music in the Air," to the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, for a run of two weeks, beginning July 17.

"Music in the Air," the most recent work of Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein 2nd, is a honey-pot of romance and melody. Every minute is full of Kern's mesmeric airs. Such is the observation of the critic, Percy Hammond of the New York Herald-Tribune. "Music in the Air" has been termed the perfect operetta. It has everything; an exquisite score, a book that sets off its modern, romantic plot with the most delightful comedy, and in the fragrant charm of its production, with scenes laid amid the grandeur of the Tyrolean Alps, as well as the sophisticated circles of Munich, there is true atmosphere allure. Jerome Kern has composed the music for over forty shows and to his credit are "Show Boat" for which Mr. Hammerstein wrote the book, "Sweet Adeline," "Sunny," and "The Cat and the Fiddle." To Mr. Hammerstein's credit are such hits as "Rose Marie," "The Desert Song" and "New Moon."

"Music in the Air" opened in New York City on November 8, and is still the most popular musical hit on Broadway. The production under the Belasco and Curran Banner is hailed as the most lavish and ambitious undertaking that these two astute Western producers have ever had the pleasure of bringing to San Francisco. It is declared to be a ranking offering of the piece in America, both as to production and cast. A cast of forty principals and a supporting company of sixty are required to carry the scenery alone.

In the company are such international favorites as Vivienne Segal, Walter Woolf, Christian Rub, William Williams, Kathryn Crawford, Alexander Kisseberg, Alphonz Ethier, Herta Richter, Hans Taenzler and Maxine Castleton, Montague Shaw, and a host of others.

One of the most noted directors of the American theater, Edgar MacGregor, staged the piece, and the large orchestra will be under the direction of Jacques Rabirot, who was the director for "Sunny," "The Three Musketeers," "Ziegfeld Follies of 1927," and the first and second "Little Shows," also the New York production of "The Cat and the Fiddle."

Melancholia and even certain forms of bad temper can be cured, it is claimed, by a new serum discovered by Professor W. Hausmann, of Vienna, according to a recent publication of the Psychiatric Clinic of the Vienna University.

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, of Florida, former member of Congress, was recently appointed by President Roosevelt to be minister to Denmark.

Designed especially for metal work, such as fender, automobile bodies and doors, a portable electric hammer recently announced is light and easy to handle.

CALIFORNIA NEWS REVIEW

A. M. Edelman, president of the California State Board of Architectural Examiners, succeeds to the presidency of the National Council of Architectural Registration Boards, with headquarters in Chicago, as a result of the death of Albert L. Brockway of Syracuse, N. Y., it was stated.

Indications are wanting that infantile paralysis will be epidemic this year, according to Dr. Giles S. Porter, State Health Department chief. In epidemic years, the increase is first detected in April and May, says the physician. The leading ailments throughout the State are given as chickenpox, measles, mumps and whooping cough.

The Sonoma Water and Irrigation Company was granted authority by the State Railroad Commission recently to sell that portion of its water system in the city of Sonoma to the city. The purchase price is $24,000. The company will retain parts of its system serving Boyes Springs, Agua Caliente and adjacent territory.

J. B. Robinson has been named president of the Yucaipa Labor and Commodity Exchange, which proposes the trading of labor for fruit. Through similar exchanges in other localities, fruit may be exchanged for products of those localities and in this way labor can be exchanged for the necessities.

Names of four Californians were submitted by Governor Rolph to Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, for possible selection as members of the board of review to consider the "presumptive" cases of veterans. The names submitted are John U. Calkins, Jr., San Francisco; O. C. Attletweed, Oakland; Victor Palmer, San Francisco; and Otto E. Sandman, Stockton.

Claude E. Nyhart, supervisor of industrial education in Los Angeles city schools, was elected president of the California Industrial Education Association at the annual convention in San Jose. George W. Mackenzie, Los Angeles, was elected secretary-treasurer, and James H. Bedford, Glendale, editor.

The Fourth of July was given added significance for nearly 200 men and women as they appeared in naturalization court to be formally made citizens of the United States. Twenty-four countries were represented by the 192 citizens appearing before Federal Judge A. F. St. Sure to take the oath of citizenship only a few hours before the anniversary of American independence.

In the picturesque, natural bowl of the new San Clemente State Beach park, surrounded by gayly dressed señoritas and dons, and hundreds of other guests, Friend W. Richardson, former Governor of California, formally dedicated the park of 600 acres and 6000 feet of beach frontage, as a permanent playground for citizens of the State and tourists, as he planted the first tree.

The return of legal beer has been an economic boon to California clam diggers. Dr. Giles S. Porter, State Director of Public Health, reported to Governor Rolph that because the shellfish is advertised in many lunch places where beer is featured, diggers have been working overtime. And so have the State inspectors assigned to see that they do not take clams from quarantined areas.

Wedding bells rang loudly in Reno recently for scores of California couples who swarmed across the State line to become Reno brides and bridegrooms. The rush, attributed to the Fourth of July holidays, set a record for 1933 at the Washoe county clerk's office and completely overshadowed a brick divorce business at the same office. Lined up before the Reno license clerk, sometimes as many as twenty couples deep, the Californians by slipping across the border evaded the law in this State, which requires three days' notice of intention to marry before a permit may be issued.

Conforming to the economic program decreed by the State Legislature, thirty-two employees of the Fish and Game Commission were dropped from the pay roll. Each bureau, except fish culture and game farms, was affected. Fifteen game wardens were dropped, seven employees of the bureau of game refuge, including three lion hunters, lost their jobs and the bureau of hydraulics was abolished. An act of the Legislature impounded $300,000 of fish and game funds and placed expenses on the fish and game division which it has not hitherto borne, it was stated in explaining the economy move.

Higher beer taxes are necessary if the estimated revenue of $2,000,000 a biennium is to be derived from beer sales, Director of Finance Vandegrift states in a report to Governor Rolph. The finance director reports that the receipts for May from the beer tax were approximately $75,000. He estimates the State's revenue from this source for the biennium at $1,500,000. "To produce $2,000,000 in revenue the rate of this tax should be increased from 62 cents to $1 a barrel," he says.

Entrance fees of 10 cents to two State parks, Mount Diablo and California State Redwood Park, will not go into effect as previously scheduled because of a large number of protests received by Governor Rolph. At the Governor's request Dan H. Blood, State director of natural resources, has ordered the collection of fees held up until a hearing can be held on the matter by the Governor.

Fruits and vegetables shipped into California will be inspected at border control stations, the State Department of Agriculture announced when Attorney General U. S. Webb approved the plan. A. A. Brock, director of the department, asked Webb if such inspection, for the safeguarding of public health, would be legal. Webb said it would, and Brock indicated an additional inspector would be stationed at each inspection point.

A tragedy of nature was disclosed recently by the discovery of two complete skeletons of deer in the water of Patterson Creek, near Etna, Cal., with the horns locked together. Orion Lewis Sanford Crawford and Austin Alford of Greenview were target shooting in the vicinity when they discovered the skeletons. The horns were completely interlocked and cannot be pried apart. One horn is embedded in the eye socket of the other skull. The deer evidently were fighting on the hill and when the horns became locked, they rolled and fell into the stream, where they either drowned or died of starvation.

A careful investigation of working conditions and wage rates paid to women employed in the picking, canning and dehydrating of fruits and vegetables in several Western States disclosed that California's wage standard is much higher than that of nearly all other States, according to a statement issued recently by Bernal H. Dyas, chairman of the California Industrial Welfare Committee. The 27½-cent-an-hour wage scale recently set for California, Washington and Oregon, Dyas said, is the highest yet established. Efforts to have other States adopt the same scale under a uniform code of ethics to govern the industry under the terms of the National Industrial Recovery Act are under way.

A real "golden" calf—despite all this talk against hoarding of the precious yellow metal—is to be provided for a Santa Barbara couple. This is what is in store for Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Crabb, pioneer residents who recently celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at a barbecue attended by hundreds of friends in Noloqui Falls Park, near Santa Ynez. During the reception they were presented with a golden gift certificate for $500 by Superior Judge Atwell Westwick of Santa Barbara, and the "golden" calf will be presented to them as soon as it is completed. It will be a tanned calf hide branded with the names of all of those joining in the unusual gift, and filled with 100 $5 gold pieces.

Wide variations in earnings and hours of work were shown in a United States woman's bureau report of men's work clothing and women's house dress factories in Arkansas, California, Georgia and the city of New Orleans. Women workers only were included in the survey of the four localities, the beginning of a study of wider scope. In the field of men's work clothing, California's median earnings were the highest, $14.50; and California had the shortest daily hours, 8, and the shortest work-week, 40 hours. California also had the highest median wage for women's cotton dresses, $10.45, the shortest daily hours, 8, and the shortest weekly hours, 44. The women's bureau attributed the markedly higher pay in this State to its minimum-wage law. In men's work clothing, Arkansas' median wages were lowest, $6.55 a week. For individual establishments, the lowest median was $2.95 in Georgia, as against $20.10 highest median for individual establishments in California.

One of the largest Indian hemp, or marijuana farms, ever found in Superior California, was discovered recently on an island in the Sacramento River, two miles west of Los Molinos, by a posse headed by William G. Walker, chief of the State narcotic enforcement division, aided by Sheriff Floyd Hull, of Tehama county, and Constable Loris Joiner, of Los Molinos. The farm consisted of four plots of Indian hemp in various stages of development, with one of the plots ready to harvest. The farm covered about four acres of rich river bottom land. Manuel Soto, 35, a Mexican, of Tehama, was arrested by the officers on a charge of cultivating hemp. The officers guarded the farm all night and arrested Soto after watching him work among the hemp for several minutes, according to the officers, with the intention of drying it as the first step in preparing it for the market. The fact that the farm existed had been known to the officers for the past two months and its development had been watched closely in order to prevent any of the poisonous weed from getting on the market.

California's stork made 2.1 per cent fewer business calls in the first three months of this year than in the corresponding period a year ago, according to Dr. Giles S. Porter, head of the State Department of Public Health. The number of births in the first three months was 11.2 per cent under the record total of the first quarter of 1930. Dr. Porter said there were 18,590 births in the first quarter of this year, 18,993 in the first quarter of last year and 21,056 in the first quarter of 1931. The new generation this year was made up of 9559 boys and 9021 girls.

Prints Triumph Anew This Summer

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NEVER such a season for prints as this! To add to their glory they are taking on simply ravishing touches of colorful velvet trimmings or else they are fur-bordered, which adds elegance supreme.

The floral patternings of the new prints are gorgeous beyond description. So outstandingly are the florals silhouetted against their backgrounds it would almost seem as if they had been painted by an artist with strokes deft and sure.

If we were to employ all the adjectives at our command we would still feel we had failed to do justice to the beauty of this season's prints and so with the thought that pictures speak more eloquently than words we are referring you to the illustration herewith.

The stunning costume centered in the group is a study in white and black. It is a Worth creation. The dress is fashioned of a superb white and black line print. These line effects are the "last word" in prints. In interpreting the mode at its best Worth makes a decorative play on velvet, using shirred black velvet for the girdle with white mat velvet for the three-quarter coat, the gloves and bag offering a pleasing diversion in that they are formed of fine ribbed white velvet. The pleated shoulder line of this enchanting velvet wrap is a touch of genius.

For bizarre and exotic coloring we refer you to the striking costume to the right in the picture. There is nothing smarter this season for daytime wear than a jacket suit all of gay print. They range from simplest types to magnificent affairs such as the model shown here. The outstanding note about this handsome print is that its gay flowers, which are in a riot of colors, are printed on a dusky red background, which leads us to say that latest reports from Paris declare that the very newest prints trend to reddish hues. The coat is edged with blue fox which gives it infinite chic. The swanky little hat is of brown cloth. These dired fabrics, ribbons and laces, are very prominent in the realm of millinery materials.

In the exceedingly clever black and white taffeta afternoon costume pictured to the left, which also comes from the house of Worth, we again see the magic of velvet as it appears on the summer style program in a trimming and an accessory role. The collar, the jabot and the top of the gloves, likewise the jaunty beret which milady wears, are of black velvet. The pleated foundation, the tunic lines and the wide-draped puff sleeves are style points of special significance.

It is surprising how many smart Parisiennes are wearing little velvet hats right in the summertime. Accessory sets which include scarf, gloves (the latest is velvet mitts), bag, sometimes adding a belt and shoes, should be part of every well-ordered wardrobe. Then, too, a collection of velvet bows and girdles will not come amiss, as they may be called upon at any time to enhance this or that summery frock.

DRESSES FROM BAGS IS ECONOMICAL FAD

Women have a new game in this country—making dresses from sacks. The idea isn't exactly new, but it was not until the depression reached its worst that the project was undertaken in earnest. It has gained popularity in recent weeks, stimulated by a contest conducted by Miss Iris Davenport, clothing specialist for the extension division of Louisiana State university.

Flour, sugar, salt, feed, seed and even fertilizer and burlap bags are used. Stitches are pulled and the bags ripped open. Stencils are removed by allowing the bag to stand in lard overnight. Bleaching and dyeing processes follow. Then it is up to the individuality of the dress-maker.

Bags that came in through the kitchen door now are seen swaggering out the front entrance as the best street frocks of the lady of the house.

Horizontal Hats Are Now Popular Fad for Women

Not your wildest oat, perhaps, but one of them—should be a big Merry Widow hat of bicycle days. They may be called like a picnic plate in play moments which offer relief from dull companions. These flattest-of-flat hats range anywhere from 10 inches across to about 22 and look completely society bells in rough straws or sheer straws with a daffy bunch of field flowers from the home-worked sofa-pillow period, perched starchy at some vantage point of the hat band.

Gingham Blouses

Plaid gingham blouses enhance the charm of linen suits. You can have a gingham hat to match and, if you want to go the whole way in gingham, gloves can be made of the same material as the blouse and hat.

SHEPHERDESS HAT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Here is one of the very latest models in wide-brimmed hats. It is one of the very new shepherdess shapes. You will observe that the crown is very shallow and that it is not pulled down to fit the head like a cap as we have been in the habit of doing. Also the brim dips over one eye, which is a characteristic feature of this season's models. It is well to take note of these details in selecting your mid-summer chapeau. The model pictured is banded with colored novelty ribbon. Paris milliners are using quantities of fancy ribbons just now.

String Belts Favored

Knitted string and plaited braid belts are a favorite with sports frocks. A natural colored linen frock has a two inch belt of knitted string—blue, green and red—and a white canvas sports dress is worn with a narrow belt of blue braid.

Sailor Collars In Again

Old-fashioned sailor collars are here again. The new designs are broader than ever, often standing two inches off each shoulder to give the broadened shoulder effect now in vogue.

Washington.—General Hugh S. Johnson, President Roosevelt's "Ira," (industrial recovery administrator) has been moving with so much speed that he now has between thirty and forty major industries in agreement respecting principles and practices which each group shall follow in getting industrial machinery into motion, labor employed and buyers buying again. He has accomplished these things by sheer driving power coupled with the full force of publicity. Industrial leaders have had to stand hitched, have had to make concessions and have had to abandon a lot of their own ideas in order to reach the agreements, but Ira has brought them together because the bulk of them were afraid of the spotlight of publicity if they failed to co-operate.

Developments under the industrial recovery act, the program which the President drove through congress as a means of making partners of business and government, have begun to show the extraordinary power accorded the President by that law. They reveal likewise the enormous pressure that can be exerted in the name of the government of the United States and the subordination to which even traditionally independent and free Americans will subject themselves in time of stress. But, simultaneously, observers here have noted the undercurrent of anger among those same industrialists at the use of the powers of the government in the way they are being used. In other words, I think it is no exaggeration to say the majority of the industrial codes were worked out under duress and fear and that the majority of those agreeing to each code had their fingers crossed and their tongues in their cheeks when they signed on the dotted lines.

General Johnson has a term—pineapples—by which he describes the knotty problems constantly recurring in his negotiations with the various industrial groups. It is freely predicted both among the industrialists who came here for their conferences on the new codes and among wisemen in the government that there will be a surplus of pineapples along with some other crops this year.

Ira had hardly been under way a week with conferences in which the codes worked out by the industrialists for governing their industries were being aired when up came the age-old pineapple of "capital versus labor." Capital can not be criticized too much for desiring to protect itself, and labor cannot be criticized too much for demanding what it considers to be its rights. Yet the feeling here seems to be that each must go along within reason under present conditions, or else each will be put in the position of cutting off its nose to spite its face. Ira was pretty "hard boiled" on this program and a full head of steam was developed that resulted in an inevitable blow-off.

The blow-off came with startling suddenness. Like lightning out of a blue sky came Miss Frances Perkins, the secretary of labor, and she laid down some solid demands in a hearing before Ira. She said that capital was trying to take advantage of labor, that it was sliding out from under the terms of the law which created Ira's job, and that Ira was moving with such speed to get recovery under way that labor was going to suffer. Miss Perkins did not say it that way, yet my language is no stronger than hers. That was an unexpected pineapple, indeed. Ira had been face to face with several of them. This, however, was the first shot from what had been looked upon as a neutral in the war between the capital and labor troops.

Correspondents who attended that hearing were given the impression that Ira did not enjoy the labor secretary's speech one bit. Some of his associates surely did not like it all, but they were less restrained than was Ira, himself, and the gossip around Washington is that Ira's staff will be happy to see Miss Perkins remain in her office which is some seven blocks from the colossal department of commerce building where General Johnson has headquarters.

Washington is actually overwhelmed with codes these days. Ira has his crop of new codes of principles and practices for industry. Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is developing a barnyard full of codes in attempting to carry out the so-called farm parity bill with its processing taxes, options to the farmers to buy hold-over cotton, and acreage reduction for various crops, and Agricultural Relief Administrator George N. Peek and Farm Credit Administrator Henry Morgenthau, Jr., have their codes. Each one has its definite purpose and each one fits into the picture which President Roosevelt is trying to put together to lead the country out of the slough.

But where are the codes going to lead? Visitors to Washington these days are many and it seems that on the lips of each there is that question. The whole program is so new and so untied on a national basis that it is quite natural to express some wonder about it.

I have heard it suggested that the various steps now being taken by the Roosevelt administration probably constitute the beginning of a new economic era. Indeed, one analyst declared that possibly the arrangement of all of the new codes of practice for industry might conceivably represent the start of a period in which the federal government will become an industrial referee or umpire. Carrying that thought further, it was conceived as possible that fewer and fewer federal laws would be enacted with reference to control of industry and agriculture. With a federal umpire to sit in judgment, for example, farmers could organize and control their own destiny, solve their own problems and be independent.

That same reasoning, it is asserted, applies to every other line of commercial endeavor. It represents a theory that private business, observed from a watchtower by something of a federal dictator, can and will manage its own affairs to a better advantage than can be done by continual enactment of new and half-baked laws. To that extent, therefore, instead of making partners of the government and private business, the Roosevelt program takes shape as a possible move to put business on a plane to do the job itself.

It seems pertinent to call attention just here to the fact that, except in wartime, neither agriculture nor any other industry has ever received the shock of its life with such equality as it has swallowed the orders of the federal government. I have heard it said that it would take just such a shock to awaken the individual members of the various lines of trade to the necessity for complete co-ordination of all of their activities and functions.

President Roosevelt, on his return to the White House after a vacation, repeated that he was in a deadly earnest about the necessity for boosting of prices and that nothing is going to stand in the way insofar as the government can control those factors. His statement was but a repetition and a broadening of his earlier appeal to the cotton farmers. To them, he sounded a keynote for the whole campaign of crop reduction. No doubt exists that unless the farmers help themselves, the crop reduction program and the consequent boost in prices cannot be expected to succeed.

In other words, the situation is this: the federal government has set up machinery for reduction of crop acreages. It has worked out a program that means higher prices for that which the farmers sell, and it has made a part of that program an inflation of credit and use of federal funds. It has resorted to its taxing power in order to obtain funds to compensate those who agree to cut acreage and reduce the surplus. It is up to the farmers, therefore, to do their part.

The reason the President spoke of cotton first was because that crop is still in a position and at a stage of growth where part of it can be destroyed. It was explained in this connection that the growth to fruition of the entire acreage of cotton now planted would increase the surplus to such an extent that a carry-over of as much as 27,000,000 bales was possible. That figure probably is too high, but the point is that that growth of this year's entire crop would only add to the amount of cotton already stored from previous years and the result obviously would be a price reduction. Some market experts say it might go down to 3½ to 4 cents a pound.

Tobacco is the next crop in line. It still can be cut down. The Department of Agriculture is working on plans to levy a processing tax to pay the growers for curtailing that crop. The tax is scheduled to be 5 cents a pound and will be collected, as the other processing taxes are, from the factories that prepare the commodity for market. A wheat processing tax of 30 cents a bushel has gone into effect already to finance curtailment of the surplus wheat acreage. And the same can be written respecting procedure for the other commodities.

Nevertheless, one can ask what good the processing tax will be and what will be accomplished by this vast machine that has been set up to help the farmers unless they themselves co-operate. The answer, if stated in candor, would be, nothing.

A few more weeks probably will be sufficient time within which to judge whether the farmers are going to do their part.

During the debate in congress when the farm parity bill was under consideration, there were frequent references to the possibility that the program could not succeed because too many farmers would hold back. So from whatever angle one examines the program, one arrives at the conclusion that it is "up to the farmer." If the price he receives for his wheat or his cotton or his other products falls to stay around the point where it is profitable for him to engage in the industry, some of his number have killed the goose that laid the golden egg.

NEW NAVY PROGRAM

Some details of the plan to strengthen the American Navy in accordance with recent legislation have been made by Secretary Swanson. Stated briefly, they are as follows: A total of thirty-two new vessels will be built during the next three years, including two 15,000-ton aircraft carriers, four 10,000-ton cruisers, four 1,850-ton destroyers, four 1,400-ton submarines, and two 2,000-ton gunboats.

For this program $238,000,000 will be made available and the work will be divided between government and private shipyards, as is customary. It is estimated by Secretary Swanson that 85 per cent of the sum to be expended for new warships will go to labor. It will directly affect some sixteen major industries and more than 100 different mechanical trades.

Lest it be thought by some that we are setting a bad example at a time when efforts for general reductions in armaments are being made, it may be said that even with the addition of these thirty-two new ships the United States will be far behind the strength permitted by the London treaty, while Great Britain and Japan have built their navies up to approximately peace treaty strength.

MAYOR'S FUTILE JOKE

An amusing twist was given to a municipal campaign in Vancouver, B. C., recently, when the re-election of Mayor L. D. Taylor was opposed by all the newspapers in the city.

Some time previous to the campaign, Mr. Taylor had been apparently at the point of death, so newspapers had prepared highly commendatory editorials for publication when he should shuffle off, and had them set in type. The mayor got well and the type was discarded, but proofs had been struck, and somehow he got hold of them.

At the height of the campaign he read the laudatory editorials to a large audience, much to the amusement of the public and the discomfiture of the editors. But the newspapers had their revenge. The mayor was defeated in the election.

If the sun were to explode we would have only 133 hours to live, according to an astronomer. But think of the hot extras the newspapers could get out in 133 hours.

An educator declares that modern youth is not so wild. Except, perhaps, during second childhood.

NEW BUILDING WAVE EXPECTED

According to government reports, the nation is short some 500,000 homes. Building operations have practically ceased since 1929. The fact that communities are plastered with "for rent" and "for sale" signs is no indication of an over-supply of dwellings; it simply indicates the extent of the doubling-up process that has taken place during depression—a process that will be reversed as conditions improve.

By the same token, the survey demonstrates that there is an almost incalculable amount of reconditioning and modernizing of existing residences that needs to be done. An interesting phase of the survey is that the small, one-family home, costing $5,000 or less, will be principally in demand when the new-building wave starts.

The thrifty home owner and prospective builder, reading this, will not miss its message. It means just one thing: Higher prices for both new construction and alterations and improvements. The first signs of that price rise are appearing, with a gradual and steady strengthening of the commodity price level. Prices are still extremely low, and there as a plentiful supply of skilled and common labor. That condition won't last forever.

If you are one of the five hundred thousand who need a home, build it now, if you possibly can. If you are one of the several million who have permitted needed repairs to go undone, have them done now. You'll be doing more than buying yourself something you need at a low price. You'll be helping provide employment and a market for supplies. You'll be an influence for recovery. Employment and investment are cheaper and better than charity.

COLLEGE MORALS

In what amounted to a defence of present-day college students against charges of immorality, which are often heard, Dr. Sweet of the divinity college of Chicago University recently told of conditions in our leading colleges in the early days.

During Colonial times and for some years following the Revolution, religion was at its lowest ebb, according to Dr. Sweet, and even in the universities Americans were hardly touched by the church. This is asserted by some of the early presidents of universities themselves.

Lyman Beecher is quoted as saying that at Yale in 1790 most of the students were skeptics, while "rowdies were plenty and wine and liquors were kept in all the rooms." Similar conditions were reported about the same time at Harvard and Dartmouth, at the latter it being said that in 1799 there was only one student who claimed to be a Christian.

Ashbel Green, who was president of Princeton from 1812 to 1822, writes that there were not more than five or six students who did not use profane language in common conversation, "sometimes of the most shocking kind." Bishop Meade has declared that the Episcopal college of William and Mary was during this period "a hotbed of infidelity and of the wild politics of France."

In spite of the conditions noted by Dr. Sweet and others, however, it seems that most of these wild students of early days turned out fairly well, and many of them became leaders in the building of the new republic.

Perhaps those of the present will do equally well after they have had their jazz age fling.

A BIG SPELLING BEE

So far as spelling is concerned, the United States Constitution was rated below Webster's dictionary by the judges in a spirited spelling bee in which Chicago officials, teachers and pupils participated recently.

In the Constitution the word "tranquility" occurs, but the dictionary spells it with a double l—"tranquillity." Various contestants spelled it both ways, and after some argument the dictionary was held to be correct.

Rose Marie Bartlett, 13-year-old country school girl, was the final winner, defeating County Superintendent Aiken by one word. That is, Rose Marie spelled "consensus" correctly, but Mr. Aiken thought it wrong, and had to concede his error when confronted with the big book. A few of the words used in the test were: Rarefy, phthisic, battalion, irascible, liquefy, heinous, putrefy, ecstasy, aligned, curriculum, despicable, transcend, publicizing and adequate.

It would be a good thing if more such contests were held among both school children and adults, as Americans are notoriously poor spellers, including many college graduates, who often exhibit surprising originality in this line.

CAN'T DODGE MONEY QUESTION

In the disagreement that characterized the first meetings of the World Economic Conference, one fact stands out: No matter how great the nations differ on most policies, they are one in the belief that currency stabilization is essential to recovery.

What form this will take is still a question. But it is likely that some means of stabilizing silver will finally be adopted. For a great many generations millions of people have regarded silver as the one money-metal—with justice it has been called the poor man's gold. Silver is selling now at ruinous prices, and the result is paralyzed foreign trade, and a tremendous drop in the purchasing power of whole nations.

The United States, and in particular Western states, where mining has been the principal employer, taxpayer and purchaser, will be watching the Conference's action on silver with keen interest.

SPENDING AND SAVING

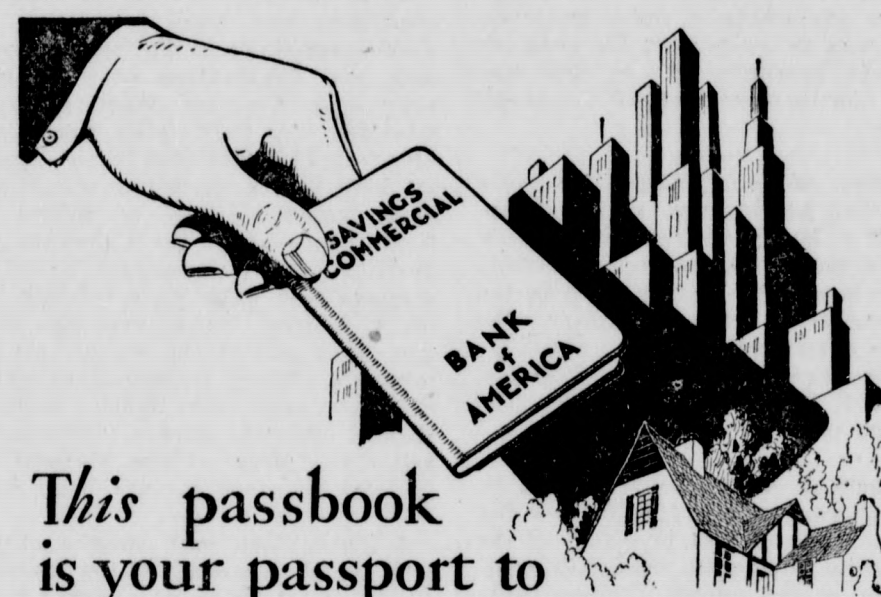

The problem of spending and saving is as old as civilization, and in scarcely any phase of human conduct do we find greater differences among different persons. It is unfortunate that so few are able to strike a happy medium between stinginess and wastefulness.

The type of spendthrift who wastes inherited money is well known, as is also the lazy, shiftless type who live from hand to mouth in good times or bad. The industrious worker who literally throws away his earnings is more rare, however.

An illustration of the latter class is seen in the late author and playwright, Edgar Wallace, who was one of the most prolific and successful writers of all time. In the twenty-five years before his death he wrote some 150 full length novels, and literally thousands of short stories, besides twenty plays. So many of his works had big sales that his income must have been exceedingly large.

He was thought to be a wealthy man, but at his death his estate was found insufficient to pay his debts, and his wife was left without means of support. It seems incredible that a man of Wallace's intelligence and tireless energy should have been so short-sighted with respect to his financial affairs.

Would-be heroes of the present generation may have their style cramped by the fact that we can't afford another war.

LOCAL RESIDENTS GIVEN PREFERENCE ON BRIDGE JOB

The influx of labor attracted by the $100,000,000 bridge project in San Francisco as well as San Francisco's new municipal public works has given rise to a labor problem which has caused Supervisor Carl W. Miles, chairman of the finance committee of the board of supervisors of San Francisco, to call for the establishment by the city of San Francisco of a municipal employment registration bureau.

The municipal employment registration bureau as planned and sponsored by Supervisor Miles, will provide a clearing house by which bona fide residents of San Francisco may be given preference on the public jobs in that city.

Seated in the first car he ever built, Henry Ford had his picture taken on the thirtieth anniversary of the Ford Motor Company, a short time ago. Alongside was one of his latest models. It was a striking illustration of automobile evolution, although the contrast would have been greater if a high-class limousine had been included in the picture. What will folks be riding in thirty years from now?

STALLED IN RAIN

When a motor fails to start after the car has been standing in the rain or in a heavy fog, the Free Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile Association suggests this plan: Wipe the distributor cap thoroughly with a dry rag, being sure to wipe briskly between wires and connecting terminals. If the engine fails to start after the cap has been wiped, have someone operate the starter with ignition switch on and watch for electric sparks jumping across moist spaces. Wipe these spaces dry and try again. This should result in drying out the shorts in a few minutes.

SIDELIGHTS

C. R. Bruce, of Birmingham, got fifteen years for slashing the throat of his bride of three months. He pleaded in extenuation that she had bit him and hit him with a pick handle. A press dispatch says that after the verdict was read, "Bruce was permitted to chat for several minutes with his wife, who was in the courtroom." Which almost reads like a happy ending.

Another fellow who fooled the doctors is William Haas of South Carolina, now 88. At eighteen he was turned down when he wanted to enlist as a soldier, because he had a weak heart, and has never been able to get life insurance for the same reason. His wife, who was a frail girl when he married her sixty-four years ago, is also still living.

Lawrence county, in Tennessee, boasts of a bull calf which weighed 150 pounds at birth. The owner had to get another "fresh" cow because the calf's mother gives only half enough milk to sustain her enormous infant. The Lawrenceburg Democrat-Union assures us that there is no "Lull" about this story.

An unusual collection of love letters written by famous men, including Lord Nelson, Benjamin Franklin, Nathan Hale and others, was recently placed on display by the Rosenbach Company in New York. Some of them were pretty mushy, even as those of today, and the imaginary ones of Andy to Madam Queen. It was a kind fate that reserved them for posterity, instead of permitting them to be read to a jury of the writers' contemporaries.

Nineteen communities of Fayette county, Alabama, joined in a rat-killing campaign whereby it is said that some 80,000 of the rodents were done away with. It is estimated that each rat destroys about $2 worth of property a year. Possibly a rat-killing campaign on a national

Rev. Aimee Semple McPherson Hutton has been in the news again, also in a Paris hospital. A mysterious cablegram to her husband said a 9-pound son had been born. Hospital attendants laughed at the idea. The attending physician said nothing. But Aimee got on the front page once more.

Probably under the impression that it would be news to someone, a national weekly prints this item: "Vermont has a town named Moscow." Perfectly true, but so has Arkansas, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas and Utah. If you don't believe it, consult the U. S. Postal Guide.

Dr. E. H. Cary, president of the American Medical Association, recently made a strong bid for popularity among the nation's youngsters. He declared that forcing children to eat spinach for the beneficial vitamins and iron it is supposed to contain is all the bunk. So far as the iron is concerned, he said it would be just as well to let a kid suck a 20-penny nail as to feed him spinach, adding that "he might like the flavor of the nail better."

The cut in veterans' pensions and other compensation has caused repercussions in unexpected quarters. In the Irish Free State, for example, 1,300 veterans who fought under the American flag, or their dependents, are affected by the new deal and they have "got their Irish up" about it.

When Frank Powell's plane hurtled to earth out of control from a height of 3,000 feet near Eldorado, Kan., it looked mighty bad for Frank at the moment, but it could have been worse. He disentangled himself from the wreckage and walked away with only a broken rib and a minor cut on the leg.

An embryo Babe Ruth sent two men to the hospital a few days ago when he smashed out a home run in a sand lot baseball game in New York. The batted ball struck a horse drawing a peddler's wagon; the horse ran away, throwing the driver out on his head and injuring a policeman who attempted to stop him.

Newspaper people, we regret to say, sometimes take an unfair advantage of folks they don't like. For example, the Cincinnati society editor who included this in her write-up of a swell reception: "Mrs. Jones appeared encased in the green chiffon which has graced so many previous occasions."

Comes now a new kind of hoarder. Frank Cimino, a big garlic grower of California, won a verdict for $35,515 damages against a Chicago storage company which let a lot of his product spoil while in its care. The defense lawyer called Cimino a "garlic hoarder."

Boston Transcript tells of the system whereby favored persons in Russia are given permits to buy railroad and theater tickets without having to stand in line awaiting their turn. But after obtaining the coveted permit the customer must take his place in another line composed of those who do not have to stand in line.

Some weird stories are going about concerning Albert Einstein of relativity fame, considered by many to be the world's greatest living scientist. Having renounced his German citizenship because of Hitler's persecution of the Jews, one newspaper says "he will settle in Switzerland and become a naturalized Swede." Another report says "he will become a professor in Madrid, in spite of the fact that Jews were banished from Spain in 1492."

Someone told certain Blue Grass state farmers that President Roosevelt's "new deal" included the giving of free horses to worthy tillers of the soil. Three of them walked 15 miles to Greenup, Kentucky, to ask if their horses had arrived. When answered in the negative, they walked back home.

In a recent issue of the Weekly Financial Review, discussing the better business outlook, it was said: "It is not to be expected that the velocity of improvement will bring prosperity over night—yet the trend is most assuredly in the right direction; the outlook more promising than at any time in more than forty months."

Either as an international good will gesture, or as a tribute to a charming personality—or both—Mlle. Francoise May, daughter of Belgium's ambassador to the United States, was selected as queen of the May apple blossom festival at Winchester, Va.

Farmer readers may be interested to know that President Roosevelt has cut the tariff on fertilizer forks, hay forks, hand rakes and hoes by 50 per cent. No change was made in the duty on spades and shovels.

Tanforan to Operate Two Days Each Week

Revised plans for the continuation, for a short time, of the Summer racing met at Tanforan, today revealed the Pacific Coast Breeders' Association will operate the track two days a week, Friday and Saturday, instead of Saturday and Sunday, as announced previously. The extension is to continue only until the Portland, Oregon, track gets in to full swing.

An attractive program will be offered Tanforan fans this afternoon and tomorrow (Saturday.) The usual number of events have been booked, and it is likely the daily card will be increased. Tomorrow the management will present the customary week-end handicap with the best mounts at the track taking part. With the two-day program, it is expected attendance will be increased.

Turf fans are interested in the possibility of a race at Tanforan before the Summer's close in which Winooka, new Australian sprinter, may be entered. Winooka was shipped across to John W. Marchbank's Heather Farm, and from there brought to Tanforan to begin training for a career on American tracks. If the horse can be conditioned in time, efforts will be made to start him at San Bruno. His appearance will be keenly watched by American turfmen, who, since Phar Lap, have a wholesome respect for Australian horses.

With the completion of the Summer meeting at Tanforan, many mounts now stabled there will go to the Portland inaugural. It is expected the San Bruno track will begin installing the new pari-mutuel system as soon as the current season closes.
